

Candy Dulfer

Dutch saxophonist CANDY DULFER continues to push boundaries with the November 2016 release of her new album 'Together (is all we got)'.

The album was inspired by all that's great in jazz, disco, soul, dance and r&b, but is also a contemporary interpretation of what's happening in music and the world today. Candy created a deeply personal and unique blend of musical genres & influences, bound together by her trademark sound, showcasing her extreme versatility.

It's hard to believe that it's been over 26 years since Candy Dulfer rose to fame with her high-profile collaborations with Dave Stewart (the worldwide number 1 smash "Lily was here") and of course the legendary Prince, whose tongue-in-cheek recommendation ("When I want sax, I call Candy") in the 'Partyman' video made the world sit up and notice the young, glamorous and talented sax player at his side. Their collaboration continued over the years with many studio sessions, TV show appearances, award show performances (including the Grammy Awards), and concert tours around the globe, including Candy joining Prince's NPG band as a permanent member for his record-shattering Musicology tour & album.

Candy has been fortunate to work - both in the studio and on stage - with some of the biggest names in music, including Van Morrison, Maceo Parker, Sheila E., Mavis Staples, Lionel Richie, Beyoncé, Pink Floyd, Chaka Khan, Aretha Franklin, and many others.

Despite these high-profile collaborations, Candy mainly focused on her solo career, starting her own band at age 13 and touring the world ever since.

Her first solo album 'Saxuality' earned her a Grammy Award nomination, the combined world-wide sales of her solo albums top 2.5 million copies, and she has had several number 1 hits in the USA.

In between her many concert tours around the globe, she still manages to join Dutch female supergroup the Ladies of Soul for their annual sold-out concerts at the massive Amsterdam Ziggo Dome, is a headline performer on Jazz Cruises in the USA and Europe, is an ambassador for the Dutch ALS Foundation, and is working on her autobiography scheduled for release in Spring 2017.

Whether she and her band play the biggest festival stages around the world, or an intimate jazz club around the corner in Amsterdam, her fans know that her concert is always the hottest ticket in town. Catch her and her renewed band on tour in Europe, Asia and the USA! Tourdates can be found on her website www.candydulfer.nl

Look for Candy's new album TOGETHER in stores November 2016.